FAVORABLE INTERIM RULING FOR RENAULT AGAINST FEU VERT

Renault applied for summary judgment against Feu Vert on Monday May 24 following its comparative tire campaign launched on May 17, 2010.

Renault, together with its dealership and agent groups, applied for summary judgment against Feu Vert at the Paris Commercial Court concerning the deceitful and irrelevant nature of Feu Vert's comparative advertisement on tire prices.

The advertising campaign concerned the prices of several Feu Vert competitors, including the Renault manufacturer network, for a selection of car tires. The aim of the advertisement was to show that the prices of eight original-tire replacement models were cheaper at Feu Vert.

The Court has just pronounced a favorable interim ruling for Renault, ordering Feu Vert to immediately withdraw the comparative advertisement from television screens and the Internet.

Renault and its network have taken note of the Court's decision in their favor.
