"The Renault Foundation's social commitments for the access to education in many countries are values that we have shared at ESSEC for many years now, particularly through our initiatives within the Centre Egalité des Chances. But this partnership is also a unique opportunity for us to offer our students the ability to enrich their skills, beyond international management, in technological, digital and mobility management, which will help to make them the leaders of tomorrow in their organizations. With the Renault Foundation, we have built a unique path that draws on several components: managerial, societal, economic, entrepreneurial, and digital".

Oliver Faust, Director of the Renault Foundation:

"With the digital transformation of companies and the emergence of the connected and autonomous car, new challenges - technical, managerial, societal, ethical, economic and legal - are challenging the players in our industry. As an integral part of Mobilize, the Group's CSR approach, the Renault Foundation aims to promote inclusion and sustainable mobility; it thus aims to play a role in the digitalization of the industry by training new generations in the professions of tomorrow, while guaranteeing equal opportunities for students, through the granting of scholarships and support for students throughout their careers".
